“Vintage 2017 is in my opinion looking to be one of the greats. While very long and mostly quite cool I think 2017 shows fantastic depth of flavour and aromas across all varietals while retaining brilliant acidity. I think its wines will show a lot of versatility in that they'll look great in youth but also hold well for the long term.”

The 2017 vintage in Tasmania was a good season with excellent fruit grown across the state. The start to the season was wet and cool, but finished dry and warm, allowing vineyards to reach their full potential. Demand continues to be very high for Tasmania's premium quality grapes.
